

Project Leader:

Landscape Architecture Project Leader: CURATING SPACES + PLACES

VIA design has a long history of making a lasting impact in our own community; demonstrated through the breadth and scope of our engagements within our region and through the work that we do in our own backyard; none more rewarding than designing engaging exterior spaces and places that respond to and enhance our fragile yet remarkably resilient coastal context.

We are seeking a Project Leader for Landscape Architecture to advance this focus and firm expertise. Our architecture and landscape projects are associated with client partners ranging from local municipalities, parks and open space authorities, university campuses, supportive housing developers, and a wide variety of non-profit organizations. Our work brings people into the landscape and supports community development and enrichment efforts with strategies such as urban food production, habitat preservation and enhancement, planned wetland migration, microclimate enhancement, public art and placemaking. This is how we practice.

VIA's history and expertise in public open space planning and design is shifting our design practice and trending to advance how we think about our relationship with the people and places we design for, our responsibility to the environment, and elevating what good design can provide for a community, organization, or individual.

To learn more of this advancement and these project leader positions please contact bval@viadesignarchitects.com